

•   .   .
ABSTRACT

A pressure sensor for contactless pressure measurement, in particular of gas pressures, having a pressure switch which is switched on or off as a function of the prevailing pressure. An in particular robust and long-lasting pressure sensor may be implemented when an LC circuit connected to the pressure switch is provided which is opened or closed as a function of the prevailing pressure.